Dear Colleague:

THE 1-MINUTE WHAT?

I think we're being insulted. The professional practice of management is as challenging and complex as the practices of medicine and law.

Yet we never hear of a 1-minute brain surgeon or a 1-minute trial lawyer. One minute is about how long the physician or attorney who tries it will last.

The quick fix. The too simple solution. The latest fad. They have no more place in your office than in the operating room or the courtroom.

Excellence in any profession cannot be achieved overnight. You learn the basics in school. You sharpen your skills in the practice of your profession. And if you mean to excel, you keep up with new thoughts and ideas by reading a professional journal.

In the profession of management, that means Harvard Business Review. I'd like to send you a free copy of the REVIEW so you can examine it and decide if you want to subscribe.

I'll also send you a free copy of "How To Motivate Employees." First it dispels the myths of motivation and then gives you a ten-step program that increases both profit and employee satisfaction.

There is no obligation to continue. But please accept your free issue of the REVIEW and your free gift before this offer expires on May 27th.

Sincerely,

A. Blair Bergstrom
Associate Publisher

Offer Expires:

May 27

Yes, send my free copy of "How to Motivate Employees" and my free copy of Harvard Business Review. If I like the Review and want to continue, I'll pay the bill for just $145 (U.S. Dollars) and receive a full 6 issues in all (5 additional issues). If I don't want to subscribe, I'll write "cancel" on the bill and return it. The free issue and the free gift will be mine to keep. But I WILL OWE NOTHING at all.
