The President of Chile
Republica de Chile
Santiago
Chile

Sir

Building an environmentally sustainable future depends on restructuring the global economy, major shifts in human reproductive behaviour and dramatic changes in values and life styles. Doing all this quickly adds up to a revolution on the lines of agricultural revolution as well as industrial revolution and one defined by the need to restore and preserve the earth's environmental systems. If this environmental revolution succeeds, it will not only rank with the agricultural and industrial revolutions but will prove as one of the great economic and social transformations in human society.

Viewing this in mind, the World Environment Congress is being organised to be held at New Delhi on 21-22-23 December 1992 with the theme "Caring for the Earth: Strategies for Environmental Sustainability". The Congress will have sub themes relating to global warming, green house effect, ozone depletion, bio diversity, eco politics, sea level rise, creation of sustainable jobs, national and international environmental laws and related environment friendly strategies for sustainable development for the launching the environmental revolution.

Organised by the Indian Institute of Ecology & Environment and sponsored by several developmental organisations, the Congress will have delegates, speakers, discussants, rapporteurs, advisors and organisers from different countries of the world consisting of policy makers, politicians, administrators, industrialists, educators, diplomats, social activists and scientists for also deciding the further lines of action for the possible implementation of the Rio Conference.

In order to make the World Environment Congress a grand success, we wish to have your good wishes, suggestions and a write up from your side so that we incorporate your view points in the deliberations of the Congress to be held in the Convention Hall of ITDC Hotel Ashok on 21-22-23 December 1992.

May we also request you to kindly depute a representative from your country to participate on your behalf. They may be from the Government (Ministers/Bureaucrates), National and International Bodies or NGOs.

With warm personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Prof. P R Trivedi
Chancellor, World Environment Congress
